

Figure 9: Diversification. As complex biological forms develop, different micro-states start to appear, creating different outcomes in different areas of the form. The final form is a collection of all these diversified micro-states.